Mission Statement: The American Institute for Contemporary German Studies strengthens the German-American relationship in an evolving Europe and changing world. The Institute produces objective and original analyses of developments and trends in Germany, Europe and the United States; creates new transatlantic networks; and facilitates dialogue among the business, political, and academic communities to manage differences and define and promote common interests.

Affiliated with The Johns Hopkins University, AICGS provides a comprehensive program of public forums, policy studies, research and study groups designed to enrich the political, corporate and scholarly constituencies it serves.

Titles, Dates, and Attendance	Expenses
1) DAAD/AICGS Fellowship Program	$173,900

Exempt Purpose Achievement. The DAAD/AICGS fellowship was designed to bring scholars and specialists working on Germany, Europe and/or transatlantic relations to AICGS for stays of one to three months. AICGS recruited DAAD fellows from pools of scholars who were working on key issues of central importance to the German-American relationship and related to one of the Institute's current programming emphases: (i) Germany and the United States in the Global Economy; (ii) New Security Challenges and Changing Foreign Policy Agendas; (iii) Germany and Europe; (iv) Culture, Values and Politics; and (v) Transnational Challenges. Particular attention was given to researchers whose topics are interdisciplinary, thus contributing to a dynamic cross-fertilization between the Institute's five research areas. Particular efforts were made to identify younger scholars in the early phases of their academic career that could benefit greatly from the kind of support offered by the program.

Exempt Purpose Achievement. When considering the economic impacts of climate legislation - that is, how to protect existing intellectual property while still encouraging greater innovation and greater investment - Germany and the U.S. find their interests in climate and energy converging. Berlin and Washington, DC, recognize that the challenge of global climate change is not an obstacle that divides, but a bridge to link and positively transform the production and use of energy, promote economic development, create technological innovations, and advance new levels of international cooperation. Moreover, the attention to climate and energy policy is not confined to the governmental sector. The commercial and industrial sectors in both countries have demonstrated the real economic imperative to adapt: in the equivalent energy efficiencies of both German and U.S. industrial sectors, and in the large inefficiencies in the U.S. housing, building, and transportation sectors vis-à-vis Germany.

Today, both Germany and the U.S. understand their shared responsibility for mitigating climate change and reducing global reliance on fossil fuels - thereby lowering greenhouse gas emissions. Viewed globally, this will require technology and solutions transfer and an equitable cost-sharing both from the developed to the developing world, as well as among already industrialized, developed countries. Both the U.S. and Germany would be well served by an economically-feasible framework for the accelerated deployment of "how" of climate change mitigation technologies and solutions. The need to explore more formally the institutional structures in both countries, as well as the international climate agenda, that can advance the exchange and application of mutually beneficial climate and energy innovations and regimes is clear.

3) ERP - German & American Responses to Economic Crisis

$88,142

Exempt Purpose Achievement. The global economy has still not managed to overcome effects of the financial and economic crises in 2008 and 2009. Despite improvements in the American and European financial markets in 2010, the fiscal crisis in Greece and the continually rising U.S. deficit have caused a decline of trust in the capital markets and have overshadowed any growth in the real economy. Fear of a new recession remains, especially as unemployment figures in the U.S. stagnate. Overcoming the recession and returning to a sustainable growth pattern, however, is of paramount importance for the wealth and security of all nations and has an impact on almost all other policy areas. With its project on "The End of the Years of Plenty? American and German Responses to the Economic Crisis," AICGS is analyzing past and current American and German economic policy decisions and their impact on transatlantic, European, and global cooperation. Together with the Brandenburgisches Institut für Gesellschaft und Sicherheit \(BIGS\) in Potsdam, AICGS will examine the salient economic policy issues of the transatlantic relationship and their effects on security, with a special focus on the U.S. and Germany as the motors of the world and European economies, respectively.
